St. Paul's Cathedral from Ludgate Hill. St. Paul's Cathedral—the fifth best church in Christendom—was designed by Wren and began in 1675, and was opened for service in 1697. It is a Gothic structure and is in the shape of a Latin cross. Each side of the west façade looking down Ludgate Hill is flanked by a bell tower, and in the northern one hangs the largest bell in England, "Great Paul" (16 tons).
